THE LITTLE MILLER.

Beneath the hill you may see the mill,
Of wasting wood and crumbling stone;
The wheel is dripping and clattering still,
But Jerry, the miller, is dead and gone.

Year after year, early and late,
Alike in Summer and Winter weather,
He pecked the stones and calked the gate,
And mill and miller grew old together.

"Little Jerry!"—"was all the same—
They loved him well who called him so;
And whether he'd ever another name,
Nobody ever seemed to know."

"Was 'Little Jerry' come grind my eye?"
And "Little Jerry" come grind my wheat;
And "Little Jerry" was still the cry,
From matron bold and maiden sweet.

"Was 'Little Jerry' on every tongue,
For Jerry was little when he was young,
And he was little when he was old,
But what in size he changed to long!"

"Jerry made up in beauty strength;
I've seen a sack upon his back,
As thick as the miller, and quite as long,
Always doing his very best."

A notable was 'Little Jerry'—
Who would sell his wheat as best he could;
"When will you grind my corn, I say?"
"Nay," quoth Jerry, "you needn't scold!"

How Jerry lived for half a day,
And never far but you'll be told;
Now Jerry's grist is known to fame,
But how he died there's none may know:

"The brook and Jerry were very low."
And then 'twas whispered mournfully
The leech had found him, and he was dead;
All the millers' wives were wailing loud.

"Poor Little Jerry" was all they said,
They laid him in his early bed—
The miller's wife was wailing loud,
"Died to die," the person said.

And all the people wept aloud,
For he had shrouded the deadly sin,
Had ever shrouded into his,
To weigh upon his parishioners.

Beneath the hill there stands the mill,
Of wasting wood and crumbling stone;
The wheel is dripping and clattering still,
But Jerry, the miller, is dead and gone.

MAJOR GENERAL SUTTER.

This remarkable old man is a Swiss by birth, an American by adoption, born of a respectable family, and enjoying independent circumstances.

He arrived in this country in 1834, and after a variety of adventures settled in 1839 in "Upper California," at that time a portion of the Mexican Territory. He selected the site of the present city of Sacramento for his residence, where he built a fort for protection from Indians, and established a tannery and other branches of industry.

He became possessor of a large tract of land, both by purchase and by grants from the Mexican Government, which tract embraced eleven leagues on the border of the river Sacramento. His flocks and herds became more numerous than those of the patriarch of U.

His cattle and his sheep, his rules and asses were reckoned by the thousand head, and he continued to grow and prosper. The war of the United States with Mexico came, and when the country was taken possession of by our forces, Sutter was among the first to hoist the American flag, accompanied by a salute of artillery from his fort.

He received command of the fort, and was subsequently appointed Indian Agent by the General in command of the United States forces.

Peace came, and Mr. Sutter continued to prosper in the accumulation of property until the latter part of February, 1848, at which time he had completed his establishment at the fort. At this time he had a stock of 8,000 head of cattle, 2,000 head of horses, 2,000 head of sheep and 1,000 hogs, and was in undisturbed and quiet possession of his vast domain. But now came a discovery, which while it has opened immense wealth to individuals, to the country and the world, and has made the means of planting a new empire in the farthest West, wrought so great a revolution to him that his prosperity and his property became diminished and valueless.

He was digging a mill race for a saw mill, when on the night of the 28th of January, 1848, Mr. Marshall, the millwright, found the small race the first California gold, the intelligence rapidly spread. All Sutter's mechanics and laborers left him. His mills became deserted, his crop perished in the fields; he could not hire men for an ounce of gold a day. Emigration poured in from the United States. His lands were entered upon, his estate appraised, and instead of being a prosperous and rich, he became involved in a large and oppressive debt, and all resources cut off save a small and mortgaged remnant of one farm. And now, aged and poor, Gen. Sutter comes before Congress for relief from his undeserved spoliation. He estimates that he has been injured to the amount of half a million dollars, while his losses have enriched the nation.—Boston Commercial.

CONCLUSION OF A SERMON TO YOUNG MEN.

"I was young, my dear sinner, to be married, and devote your time to morality and money-making. Then let your homes be provided with such comforts and necessities as piety, pickles, pots and kettles, brushes, brooms, benevolence, bread, virtue, wine and wisdom. Have these always on hand and happiness will be with you. Do not drink intoxicating liquors, eat moderately, go about business after breakfast, lounge a little after dinner, chat after tea, and kiss after quarreling. Then all the joy, the peace and bliss the earth can afford will be yours until the grave closes over you, and your spirits are borne to a brighter and happier world."

A WISH.—An Irishman fell in love with a lady, but she, instead of reciprocating his affections, fell in love with another man and married him, which caused Pat to exclaim in the fullness of his heart: "Och, would that you had been born twins so that I could have had half of you."

Sec. 3. No two members of the Board of Trustees shall belong to the same denomination.
